Forty-Sixth Witness Testifies Friday in Mansfield Manslaughter Case-Sixth Death from Infantile Paralysis-High School Registration 237-Big Revival Planned.

Friday was the thirteenth day of the too one representing Mr. Mansfield at trial of Charles H. Mansfield, engineer of the Glit Edge express on the night of the railroad wreck at Bradford, who Frank H. Nicholson, assistant elec-trical engineer of the New Haven road signal system, who testified several is charged with manslaughter on two counts. The state claims the signal system was ignored, that Mansfield took his train past the distant signal days ago, was recalled. He made tests at Bradford on the 24th and 25th of April, and the wreck occurred on the 17th. He made tests on the 26th with when it was set at caution, or danger, while the defendant claims that the signal gave him a clear track, and that signal gave him a clear track, and that the red home signal was flashed upon him, too late to prevent collision with New London local train 633 which was at the Bradford station. Therefore the workings of the signal system are brought into the case and the main testimony for the state thus far relates to the signals. In the cross examination of Expert Morrison, Friday, several towers and block systems on the representatives of the interstate commerce commission, and on the 24th with Mr. Morrison. Tests were made to determine as to insulation and grounding of the wires and they were found in proper condition on the 24th. The tests on the 26th were under the direction of Mr. Ellis of the interstate John R. Wilcox, sheriff for Washington county, was the first witness at the afternoon session. He had been show that the signals at these places did not work properly to support the theory that the signals were not properly worked at Bradford on the night of the wreck.

On cross examination by Attorney Fitzgerald, the sheriff said he never had a formal summons and was not asked to locate Ross until after the Charles H. Morrison, who has the general charge of the signal service of the New Haven road signal system, who was on the witness stand when court adjourned Thursday, continued his testimony under cross-examination by Attorney John J. Fitzgerald. Mr. Morrison testified that the automatic signals were operated by a motor to regulate the blade, but the current was distributed to the motors in different ways, and there are circuit breakers connected with all of them. The distant signal is always at caution when a train enters the block. The automatic distant signal is operated by tion when a train enters the block. The automatic distant signal is operated by the passage of a train which serves as a cut-out to the electric current. There was long discussion caused by Attorney Phillips objecting to the line of testimony as the system referred to was not identical with that at Bradford and Wood River. Mr. Fitzgerald says his only purpose was to show that the system did not always work properly and that features in other systems insofar as the site of the system of the system of the system did not always work properly and that features in other systems insofar as the system of the system of

The reason why these railroad witnesses were no summoned in the regular way by the sheriff was because the method adopted was the best, judging from his personal experience as a lawyer,

A discussion arose when Attorney Phillips assumed a generous attitude and offered to put in the Bradford tower sheet and the train despatcher's train sheet. Mr. Fitzgerald objected to the latter and asked for the former. It was then when Mr. Phillips said. "Is there noted that the first home signal was at horizontal and with a red light.
